Produce Markets. CHICAGO, April 18 .- The grain market developed activity and strength to day in the absence of war news, the movement being apparently based largely upon the crop outlook, which has induced considerable outside speculation. The prospect of war has been laid aside as the decline in English consols had its effect upon prices at the The extremes of prices for the week were 861/9 96 cfor the June options of wheat, closing i night at 89@89%c. The receipts of wheat continu light, the aggregate for the week being 240,000 bushels, with shipments of 280 0.0. Crop advices continue discouraging and considerable "lon buying of wheat is taking place upon the theor of a short crop. The advance in wheat to-day was steady, the market closing at nearly outside figures. There was good speculation in corn, wit some excitement attending the dealings in the May option, "shorts' exhibiting a strong desire to cover. The price for May rose to 47%c, and closed lower. The other options also ruled higher, but at a discount as compared to the prices paid for May. In the early trading there was strong buying of oats, and prices advanced lothic, bu fully one half the advance was subsequently lost, the market closing steady. Provisions were fairly setive and ruled somewhat higher. Flour-Firm and unchanged. Wheat-There was a good speulative demand, and with lower consols and bad crop reports, the "shorts" were inclined to cover.
